TTCR.hcmcode TTCR.hcmcode is used on some transponders to signify the HCM (HCHMechanical code) field is associated with another code (or e.g. the NMEA-code). The TTCR-prefix itself is a prefix for housekeeper-codes, the HCM is then associated with these codes, either via HWPTL.hcmcode (or the other way round) or via data stored in the transponder during manufacture. You can find the HCM code with the command: $ hcmlog Disadvantages of this approach are that housekeeper codes will be assigned at the factory, even though there are not specific transponders intended to hold housekeeper codes or more housekeeper codes than the other codes. If you want to have the maximum amount of housekeeper codes available on a transponder, you can store the HWPTL-prefix on the trans

Resto [2022]

Resto allows restaurant managers to quickly create and manage menus, order tickets and manage customer communication. Resto lets you create new menus, edit, delete or activate existing ones, list customers, classify them by class and group, show customers' orders and their waiting time, manage commissions and invoices, or filter customers by where they are from. Resto can generate the order for each table, including price, dishes, guests and payment lists. Resto lets you view how much money each customer owes and how much food was ordered. It keeps track of your restaurants' totals for each category, and allows you to see which ones are doing better and which ones need to improve. Resto allows you to send marketing emails, run ads, and customize text. Resto is designed to match your Windows desktop, but will look quite nice on a small mobile screen. Resto uses the Windows Phone-style theme, to give you a feel for the application's visual design. You can also customize the application's appearance.
