Choose between 4 challenge modes and 3 difficulty levels. Remorseless Eyes is a very challenging platformer but also one of the most fun gaming platformer I've ever played. Wake up to the sound of a crash, and you discover that someone has broken into your room and you are the only one home when you're awoken by the sound of moving. A shadow is moving across the floor. You discover that the culprit is your new pet. You can use any keys to activate the trap, with the exception of the arrow keys. The third and final part of the trilogy of the 8-Bit Buddy series, Flappy Lock 2 features 3 new 3D environments, a new gameplay mechanic and more levels. Flappy Lock 2 took me several years to develop and I think it is the best of the trilogy. Flappy Lock 2 incorporates several new concepts: * Free Mode: Play the most challenging level you can and try to pass through all obstacles without dying! * Random Mode: Play a randomly generated level and watch out for the many traps set by Flappy Lock to deprive him of a second chance. * Buddy Mode: Your friends always have your back, so get ready to test their skills and get out of the danger! Flappy Lock 2 is a game completely designed by myself, so I had full control on all aspects of the game. Flappy Lock 2 features: * 3 different environments * 6 birds * 60+ Levels * 3 difficulty options * Music/Soundtracks by * Almost-No-Words-We-Care-of-You-English-Version

----- [Guide available for the 1.1 version of the game](----- Flappy Lock 2 is a pixel-art game that can be played on both mobile devices (Android, iPhone, iPod Touch) and tablets (iPad, Android, iPad). Unfortunately, due to the low size of the game, Flappy Lock 2 is only available for the iPad. If you enjoy the game, please, consider adding a review (also available in the official website). The mint phenolic compounds, menthol and menthone, are known as an aroma component of Mentha piperita, the wild mint plant. The aim of the present study was to evaluate the protective effect of the aroma on oxidative stress and to understand the underlying molecular mechanisms involved in this protection. In an attempt to better elucidate the hepatoprotective effects of the aroma of M. piperita, ethanol-induced oxidative stress in the liver was studied in mice receiving intragastrically M. piperita or its aroma for 14 days. It was found that the aroma of M. piperita and its biologically active compounds, menthol and menthone, protected the liver against ethanol-induced oxidative stress. In addition, the effects of the aroma on ethanol-induced changes in the liver antioxidant enzymes and lipid peroxidation were examined. The results suggest that the aroma exerts its protective effect by increasing levels of glutathione, superoxide dismutase, and glutathione peroxidase; maintaining levels of reduced glutathione; decreasing the lipid peroxidation product, malondialdehyde; and elevating the activity of catalase. In addition, the aroma increased the relative expression of glutathione synthetase mRNA and protein expression in the liver. These data suggest that the aroma of M. piperita protects the liver against ethanol-induced oxidative stress by elevating liver antioxidant enzyme activities and increasing mRNA and protein levels of antioxidant enzymes and glutathione synthetase in the liver.

Q: C++ pass two parameters to function I want to write a function in C++, the signature of the function is: void function(int, int); The first parameter is the index of an element in a 2d array, the second is some other index. The function should calculate the element in the 2d array at the specified index and at the second index, and return the result. I have this code in C++: `void function(int index, int other_index) { int[] data = {{1,2,3,4,5},{6,7,8,9,10}},` leo iumque suos ergo Friday, March 22, 2011 All I know for sure is that I love it when the blessed one comes home. The little one's adoration, the excited giddy hugs, the marveling at the littlest bits of her. And everything that I know for sure is that I don't seem to be able to force her to sleep. Sleep, sleep. Stay asleep, asleep. Just sleep. Just sleep. Just sleep. That seems to be her plea. I don't know anything more for certain than that. I like all the noises of the house being alive and well, my girl contentedly and unkempt. No more crying when I get home. No more whiny meeping. No more mewling. No more himepets. That means all is well. Bassacs is sitting outside the door of the master bath reading a book. I think it's a Robin book. He sure is attentive to him. And the Blessed One is playing with the little one. He may or may not be aware I'm home. We won't know until she finally lets go and just plays. This blog is in remembrance of a sweet Kitten that didn't make it past her first year. The first two are for individual posting. For the busy schedules of the third, Kweko, I have chosen the "pop in and pop out" method. Just remember, a day cannot be the same as any other. Farewell, "Daddy" & "Momma"]]> Darwin's Alarm - Feb 11, 2011 February 11, 2011 There seems to be a lot of fuss about Al Franken. I'm not sure I get it, given that everything I know about him is negative.

Oh wait, as I got to thinking about it I remembered what I do know is positive. He is a funny person. Ha ha, we all know that, but I'm talking about his TV show on NBC. Every week he seems to do something that makes me laugh. Sure he gets a little off the track and that annoys me, but he's got a way. His celebrity targets are not unknown to me.

, the Burmese should not be trusted. They told me that, according to the terms of the agreement, I have 24 hours to relinquish possession of my property. Once I am out of the city, I will be risking my life. I don't believe that the authorities will allow it. What's Next? Let me repeat that. I am at risk of my life here. Somehow, I don't think that they would let me just leave town under those circumstances. I don't know if I will be able to slip away before they catch me. The mayor has taken most of the furniture out of the house. What will I do? I don't want to be homeless, but I don't think I can just leave in this predicament. If I do decide to leave, where do I go? The closest city is Mandalay. It takes all day to get there. How would I find food, lodging, and transportation? I am wearing the same clothes that I wore on the day I was arrested. I am not sure. I don't know what my options are. Will I run out of money? Would they let me leave the country? Should I just give up? I don't want to. My life and my fate are in a foreign country - they don't belong to me. But I have no way to find anything to eat or anywhere to sleep. I don't want to die here. I don't want to become a war refugee. I have already lost my freedom in this country. I feel compelled to keep writing for the people of Mandalay. They deserve to know how they are being treated. Perhaps if I do more, they can talk to their government about this illegal situation. We Burmese are homogenous in Myanmar. We are innocent. We are Buddhists and we love the land and the land belongs to us and there's no need to kill our own citizens. We are innocent. So far, no one has come by to visit me. My mother
