[Effect of Clostridium difficile on children with congenital B12 deficiency]. Clostridium difficile hypervirulent strains are responsible for a generalized diarrhea. Bacterial overgrowth in the small intestinal tract is frequent in children suffering from chronic malnutrition and intestinal infection. Ninety-two children with B12 deficiency (ultradiagnosis positive) were treated during a year by a gastrointestinal preparation containing sorbitol and oral B12 supplements. In case of a significant diarrhea (more than three enemas per week), the treatment was successful and B12 levels returned to normal. During this treatment, the hypoproteinemia was partly corrected and the anthropometric disorders improved; no side-effects were observed. It is thus possible to propose in children suffering from B12 deficiency, a regular antibiotic therapy and a daily sorbitol preparation for a year..0 eV, showing that the defects do not prevent the conduction along the x direction. Therefore, the conduction in the forward direction is expected to be a thermal-assisted process. In summary, we proposed a thermal-assisted hot-carrier extraction scheme to generate a carrier with the highest energy among carriers at the surface, which can directly inject holes into the surface states and extend the lifetime of the surface states. Theoretical predictions show that the effects of the electron temperature are negligible when the annealing temperature is under 300 K. Further experiments with a gated p-type InP heterostructure (sample B) and high-temperature annealing validate our predictions. The lifetime of the surface states in an InP heterostructure reaches 40 ps at an annealing temperature of 300 K and is extended to about 700 ps by incorporating the proposed thermal-assisted extraction scheme. Methods ===== Sample preparation ----- The samples used in the experiments were a p-type InP epilayer on a GaAs(001) substrate with a 15 nm epilayer of InP and an intrinsic InP layer, which was grown by molecular beam epitaxy (MBE) on a GaAs(001) substrate. The epilayer was doped with a donor concentration of $1.6 \times 10^{13} \text{ cm}^{-3}$ and an electron mobility of $8.0 \times 10^4 \text{ cm}^2 \text{ V}^{-1} \text{ s}$

In a large bowl, whisk the flour, baking powder, salt and pepper. In a stand mixer or with a hand held mixer, beat the butter and sugars on medium speed for 2-3 minutes until creamy and well mixed. Beat in the eggs, one at a time, scraping down the sides of the bowl as needed. Mix in the vanilla, orange and lemon zests. Mix in the dry ingredients in 3 parts until just combined. Divide the dough into 12 pieces and shape each piece into a ball. Place the balls, 1 inch apart, on the prepared baking sheet and press each ball flat with your fingertips. Cover with a piece of foil and bake for 15 to 18 minutes, until the tops of the cookies are just barely set but still slightly soft in the center. Remove the foil and bake for another 3 to 4 minutes, until the cookies are cooked through and just beginning to darken. Allow the cookies to cool completely on a wire rack. The present invention relates to sander frame assemblies having a plurality of separate and independent support structures for supporting a sanding apparatus thereon. Sanding apparatus for sanding a surface are known to the art and comprise a base, a sanding head carried on the base for engaging a surface to be sanded, a sanding belt assembly rotatably mounted to the base and having a plurality of sanding discs mounted on the belt for engagement with the surface to be sanded, an electrical power supply for driving the belt and the sanding discs, and a handle which is adapted to be grasped by a user and which is connected to the sanding head for rotating the base together with the sanding head. A problem associated with known sanding apparatus of this type is that, in use, a substantial portion of the individual operative components, such as the power supply, the handle, the base and the sanding head, extends from the base and this increases the overall width of the sander when in use. It is an object of the present invention to provide a sanding apparatus of the type referred to in which the operative components of the sanding apparatus extend from the base in a substantially reduced lateral extent.
