POTATO SALAD WITH SLICED

LEAKEN BREAD I love potato salad and made it again for this month's CSA. It's a bowl of salad rather than a potato salad with dressing - the taste, texture and appearance is much more appealing to me.

I have a thing for cubed potatoes so I slice them for this recipe. A few tips about this recipe: 1. You don't have to use the whole potato. I bought 3 pounds and would only use about 1/2 a pound. For the full recipe you would need at least 4 pounds. 2. you can make a batch on Sunday or another night and just leave the bread in the water from soaking. 3. It's nice to make this a bit ahead of time. After the salad is made, I just let it marinate in the vinegar and oil overnight in the fridge. This is great for a party and everyone is able to add something of their own. Slice the potatoes into cubes. You do not have to use the whole potato. Place potatoes in a large bowl or you can use a big serving bowl. Add the potato to the flour until well coated and shake off the excess flour. Fill a large pot with cold water and add 1/4 cup of salt. Put the flour coated potatoes into the pot and cook until tender. I like my potatoes to be almost there but a few might still be raw so add a little more salt as necessary. You can now remove the potatoes to a large bowl.

Comparative study of protease-activated receptor-2 downregulation in rat lung by 5'-fluorouracil and erlotinib. Protease-activated receptors (PARs) are novel G-protein-coupled receptors activated by extracellular proteases, including thrombin, trypsin, and tryptase. PAR2 has been identified in a variety of cell types including lung, kidney, and endothelial cells. The present study demonstrates that 5'-fluorouracil (5'-FU) induces a decrease in PAR2 protein expression in rat lung. Rats were treated with intraperitoneal injection of 5'-FU (125 mg/kg body weight) or PBS. After 7 days of treatment, real-time RT-PCR was performed to measure the mRNA level of PAR2. Western blotting was used to determine the expression of PAR2 protein. PAR2 expression was also measured after the addition of 5'-FU (50 mg/kg body weight) to primary cultures of rat lung cells. 5'-FU treatment resulted in a decrease in PAR2 mRNA and protein expression in rat lung. This decrease was reversible if rats were treated with the PAR2 antagonist, SB239063. In rat lung cell culture, 5'-FU (50 mg/kg body weight) significantly decreased PAR2 protein expression in lung cells. These results suggest that 5'-FU may downregulate PAR2 expression in the lung by inducing decreased intracellular protein synthesis. Further studies should be undertaken to understand the regulation of PAR2 and to determine its role in lung injury. What's left to know: Take your own safety seriously It has become more and more popular among people to just go out and play in the fields after they get home from work. Unfortunately, this trend isn't even that rare in the big cities. Only a few days after I posted about protection, I found a disturbing article written by a close friend. This is her second experience with being attacked by a dog in her city. The last one was three weeks ago, and the only dog that attacked her was a pit bull-corgi mix, who was now shot and killed by a police officer. While only in one instance did the dog kill the victim, this is a growing issue throughout our country, and only getting more and more popular. And the attacks, which are often life-threatening, are left unchecked and undervalued. People who live in large cities know
